

KU School of Business Follow

Stories about the students, alumni, faculty and staff of the University of Kansas School of Business.
Feb 13, 2015 · 2 min read

New faculty: Matt Kincaid

Matt Kincaid

No stranger to the University of Kansas, Matt Kincaid spent eight straight years as a Jayhawk. More than two years since graduating, Kincaid, an attorney at Martin, Pringle, Oliver, Wallace & Bauer LLP, is returning to campus this spring as a business law lecturer with the KU School of Business.

Kincaid earned degrees in economics and psychology as an undergraduate and a law degree with a certificate in business and commercial law from the School of Law and an MBA from the School of Business.

“I like so many things about KU,” Kincaid said. “If I had to narrow it down to just one, I would say it is the breadth of affordable options that KU offers to its students. Students can attend KU and, without an overly burdensome price tag, become whoever they want to be.”

Kincaid began working at Martin, Pringle, Oliver, Wallace & Bauer LLP in 2012. He said he is looking forward to building relationships with his new colleagues and establishing himself as a teacher from whom students want to learn. He hopes to create an interactive classroom environment.

“Interactions build relationships, which include the relationships that I have with my students, as well as the relationships that students have with each other,” he said. “It is my hope that these interactions will also create greater engagement with the material, which ultimately should foster enhanced learning.”

Kincaid will be teaching BLAW 505: Legal Aspects of the Management Process.

By Paige Adamany